MAR-MARTINE. [By Thomas Nash.] 4to. No pagination. [Pierce's Martin Marprelate Controversy.] N.P., N.D.

I know not why a trueth in rime set out
Maie not as wel mar Martine and his mates,
As shamelesse lies in prose, books cast about
Marpriests, & prelates, and subvert whole states.
For where truth builds, and lying overthroes,
One truth in rime, is worth ten lies in prose.

MEDLEYS (the) for the year 1711. To which are prefix'd, The five Whig-Examiners. 12mo. London, 1712

"The efforts of the paper [the Examiner] just named, were opposed in powerful language, aided by wit and argument in 'The Whig Examiner,' a paper by Addison; of which only five numbers were published, between the 14th of September, and the 12th of October. Swift exults in its death, as a triumph over a formidable enemy; but it was only laid down to make way for 'The Medley.' This paper was projected by Arthur Maynwaring, a gentleman of great accomplishments, and a considerable critic, and well versed in the politics of the day. The first number appeared the 5th of October, 1710, and it closed with the 45th, which was published the 6th of August, 1711, the 'Examiner' having promised to lay down his pen. Oldmixon had a considerable share in the 'Medley'; and Steele, Kennet and Anthony Henley, each contributed a paper. After an interval of several months, it was revived March 3, 1712, but finally expired upon the 4th of August in the same year, when it had reached, also to forty-five numbers. . . . They were both collected into small volumes, soon after publication, that in this more stable form they might give a more permanent influence to the purposes of party."—Wilson's Life of Defoe, iii. 151-2.

MEMOIRS concerning the affairs of Scotland, from Queen Anne's accession to the throne to the commencement of the union of the two kingdoms of Scotland and England, in May, 1707. . . . [By George Lockhart, of Carnwath.] The third edition. To which is added an appendix. 8vo. Pp. xxx, 420. [Lathbury's Nonjurors, p. 243.] London, 1714

The Introduction was written by Sir David Dalrymple, Lord Advocate of Scotland. At the end of the work, there is "A Key to the Memoirs of the affairs of Scotland," printed at London in 1714, pp. 19.

"The time in which these memoirs were published, as well as the singular preface prefixed thereto, has ever created some doubts about the book. Now the truth of this business stands thus. Mr Lockhart actually wrote them; and what is more, continued them to the time of his death, or very near it, as his son informed me. In the last Parliament of Queen Anne, while in town, he happened to lodge in the same house with Sir John Houston, who desired the favour of perusing them; which being granted, he was so unpolite as to order his valet to copy them. Sir John's valet telling Sir David Dalrymple's valet what he was about, Sir David directed his servant to propose giving him twenty guineas if he would copy them likewise for him, which he did. Sir David having thus obtained them, thought himself at full liberty to publish them, and the preface is of his writing. By a very odd mistake, as my noble friend, the Duke of Argyle, told me, Bishop Burnet mistook A— in these Memoirs for Argyle, which in reality stands for Annandale, and in consequence of that mistake makes the Duke of Argyle in King James's interest."—Dr. John Campbell.

NAKED (the) gospel. Discovering I. What was the gospel which our Lord and his apostles preached? II. What additions and alterations later ages have made in it? III. What advantages and damages have thereupon ensued? Part I. Of faith. By a true son of the Church of England [Arthur Bury, D.D.]. 4to. Pp. 102. [Queen's Coll. Lib.] N.P., 1690

There were two editions printed at Oxford, differing in some respects by reason of elisions and alterations. There were also two pirated editions printed in London in the same year.

The second edition (1691) bears the author's name.

This work was written as a protest against metaphysical speculations regarding the Trinity and the Person of Christ, as subjects beyond our capacities, and pleaded for a return to the Gospel in its primitive simplicity—love to God and man, with the two precepts, repentance and simple faith in Jesus as the Son of God, the Messiah. Though there was published, in the same year, "An Historical vindication of the Naked Gospel" [by Jean Le Clerc], Bury's treatise was condemned as heretical by the University of Oxford, and a copy was publicly burned. On the other side, there appeared "An Account of the proceedings of . . . Jonathan [Trelawny], Lord Bishop of Exeter, against Dr Bury . . ;" "A Defence of the proceedings . . ;" "A Vindication of Mr James Colmer . . . ;" all three anonymously [by James Harrington]. Other writers against the work were Wm. Nicholls, Thos. Long, Henry Felton. A list of these controversial pamphlets is given in Boase and Courtney's Bibl. Corn., p. 772.

NAKED Popery; or the naked falshood of a book called "The Catholic naked truth, or the Puritan convert to apostolical Christianity," written by W. H. [William Hubert, alias Berry]; opening their fundamental error of unwritten tradition and their unjust description of the Puritan, the prelatical Protestant, and the Papist, and their differences. . . . [By Richard Baxter.] 4to. [Arber's Term Cat. i. 527.] London, 1676

NAKED (the) truth. By Albert Ross [Linn Boyd Porter]. 8vo. New York, 1895

So much difficulty has been experienced by bibliographers in discovering the name of the author and ascertaining precisely his object in penning this treatise that a brief sketch, specially indicating changes in his views at different stages in his life, may be found helpful. Born near Ellon in Aberdeenshire, and brought up as a Scottish Episcopalian as well as a strong supporter of the Stuart dynasty, he was trained as a clergyman and was appointed Bishop of Galloway in 1687. This volume, issued some years previously, though professedly directed against "ancient and modern Papists," was rather really a veiled attack on the Church of England and thus evoked several defensive replies, including "The Protestant and Popish way of interpreting Scripture . . ." [By Robert Grove, Bishop of Chichester], "Some dialogues between Mr G. and others. . . ." [by Dr Thomas Lynford]. At the Revolution, Gordon accompanied James II. to Ireland and St Germain in France, where for a time he privately conducted worship on episcopal lines; but through personal intercourse with Bishop Bossuet, he was quietly received into the Romish Church and afterwards made public profession in Rome, where he died in 1726. The initials "E. G." have been interpreted as representing "Edmund Gibson"; other misattributions of authorship are "Robert Brown, Romish priest in Scotland," and "S. J. Brown."

PERCY (the) anecdotes, original and select. By Sholto [Joseph Clinton Robertson] and Reuben [Thomas Byerley] Percy, Brothers of the Benedictine Monastery, Mont Benger. 12mo. 20 vols. London, 1821–3

". . . The name of the Collection was not taken from the popularity of the Percy Reliques, but from the Percy Coffee House in Rathbone Place, where Byerley and Robertson were accustomed to meet to talk over their joint work. The idea was, however, claimed by my clever master and friend, Sir Richard Phillips, who stoutly maintained that it originated in a suggestion made by him to Dr Tilloch and Mr Mayne to cut the Anecdotes from the many years' files of the Star newspaper, of which Dr Tilloch was then the editor, and Mr Byerley, assistant editor; and to the latter over-hearing the suggestion, Sir Richard contested, might the Percy Anecdotes be traced. I have not the means of ascertaining whether Sir Richard's claim is correct. . . ."—John Timbs. [N. and Q., Feb. 1853, p. 214.]

This treatise, which represents the Lord's Supper as devoid of mystical or sacerdotal efficacy, and not conveying any special benefit, but merely as a commemorative rite, at once began a sharp theological controversy, mainly confined to the Church of England. Naturally, opponents were chiefly High Church men; the most prominent among those who attached their names to their replies were Bishop Ridley, Archdeacon Warren, William Law, Thomas Brett, Thomas Bowyer; more numerous, however, were anonymous critics. On the other hand, scant approval of the work was expressed, but Samuel Rudd and T. Buttonshaw declared their assent. To Hoadly himself is credibly attributed "A Defence of . . . the Plain Account . . ." and "A farther Defence of . . . the Plain Account . . ." An ironical production on the authorship was issued anonymously by Philip Skelton ("A Vindication of the . . . Bishop of Winchester against . . . those who . . . ascribe the . . . Plain Account . . . to his Lordship"). See also "The Rational Christian's assistant . . ." and "The Rational Communicant . . ."

POETICAL amusements at a villa near Bath. 8vo. 4 vols. Bath, 1776–81

". . . After their return to Batheaston she [Lady Anna Miller] invited all persons of wit and fashion in Bath to meet once a fortnight at her house. An antique vase that had been purchased in Italy—it was dug up at Frascati in 1759—was placed on a modern altar decorated with laurel, and each guest was invited to place in the urn an original composition in verse. A committee was appointed to determine the three best productions, and their authors were then crowned by Lady Miller with wreaths of myrtle. The practice was continued till Lady Miller's death. . . . In 1775 a selection of the compositions was published under the title of 'Poetical amusements at a villa near Bath' . . . a new edition appeared in 1776 with a second volume. . . . A third volume was published in 1777 and a fourth in 1781. . . . Among the contributors were the Duchess of Northumberland, Lord Palmerston, Lord Carlisle, Anstey, Mason, David Garrick, Miss Seward, and Lady Miller herself. . . ." [D.N.B. vol. 37, p. 405.]

PREDESTINED (the) thief; or, a dialogue between a Calvinistic preacher and a thief condemned to the gallows: in which is represented, in a copy drawn as it were from the life, the influence of Calvinistic principles in producing crimes and impieties of every sort, and the impediments placed by those principles in the way of the sinner's repentance, and amendment of life. [With an application to the recent case of Robert Kendall, who was executed at Northampton, August 13, 1813.] Translated from the original Latin; published, London, 1651 (without either the author's or printer's name). [By Henricus Slatius.] 8vo. Pp. 65. London, 1814

The "original Latin," of which the above is a translation, has been frequently ascribed to Archbishop Sancroft. It is printed in the appendix to D'Oyly's Life of Sancroft, 2 vols., 1821, in the first vol. of which the evidence in favour of the authorship of Sancroft will be found. It is most probable that Slatius was the author of the original work, which was written in Dutch and published at Dort in 1642, and of which the Latin is only a translation. In the printed catalogue of the Bodleian Library, the work, in Dutch and Latin, is entered under both Sancroft and Slatius, with an indication that the latter was most probably the author. It was first published in English in 1658. The above translation was, according to Watt, the work of the Rev. Boucher Nicholls, Dean of Middleham. The translation is also ascribed to the Rev. E. Griffin, in Bogue and Bennett's History of Dissenters, p. 21.

PROTEUS redivivus; or the art of wheedling, or insinuation, obtain'd by general conversation, and extracted from the several humours, inclinations, and passions of both sexes, respecting their several ages, and suiting each profession or occupation: collected and methodized by the author of the First part of the English rogue [Richard Head]. 8vo. Pp. 352. [D.N.B. vol. 25, p. 327.] London, 1675

Author's epistle signed: R. H.

"According to the promise made in my post-script to the first part of the English rogue, I purposed to have finisht that book in a second part, . . . but seeing the continuator hath allready added three parts to the former, and never (as far as I can see) will make an end of pestering the world with more volumes and large editions, I diverted my intention into this subject, the Art of wheedling. . . ."

This extract from the Epistle prefixed to Proteus redivivus, seems to prove that Lowndes is mistaken in assigning the second part of the English rogue to Head, the first only being his, and the second, third, and fourth by Kirkman.
